

eat · taste · speak

language and food

9. April
Alice Mitchell & Thomas Widlok
NJAS Special Issue launch
"Framing difference in age and generation in Africa"

23. April
Angelika Mietzner & Anne Storch
Koloniale Kontinuitäten:
ein Reisebericht

30. April
Janine Traber
Ingesting Ceebu Jën:
Colonialism and Gender
Roles in Senegal

14. Mai
Jan Knipping
I am what I drink? – Drinking, belonging and human differentiation in Kampala

28. Mai
Viveka Velupillai
The linguistics of food &
the food of linguistics

4. Juni
Chiara Witry et al.
Dark cooking

18. Juni
Tomer Gardi
In Arbeit: Halbgekochte
Kostproben aus einem unfertigen Globalroman

25. Juni
Nick Faraclas, Dannabang
Kuwabong & Desmond Odugu
Food Ways as Cultural and Historical Memory in the Afro-Atlantic: Gardens, Markets,
Corner Stores and Maggi Cubes

9. Juli
Yemisí Aríbisálà
Longthroat Memories
Reading and Discussion

Wednesday · 10:00–11:30 h

Institute for African Studies and Egyptology · University of Cologne

Colloquium SS 2025

eat · taste · speak

language and food

The linguistics of food, eating and taste is a diverse and productive field which includes research on the language of perception as well as on ways of speaking about food in tourism contexts, among a variety of other topics.

At the same time, contributions to the sociology, economy and history of food and taste in a postcolonial world continue to offer meaningful insights into colonial continuities as well as the diversity and creativity of global and local foodways.

This lecture series aims at bringing together different contributions, debates and narratives on food, taste, gastronomy and gastrosophy from the

- Africa continent and beyond.

Wednesday · 10:00–11:30 h

Institute for African Studies and Egyptology · University of Cologne

Colloquium SS 2025